1. 72-hours of strike suspension at the Ministry of Commerce

On strike since April 22, employees of the Ministry of Trade and Industry (MCI) have decided to suspend their strike. This decision comes after an agreement that would have been reached with the Ministry and employees on their many demands (better working conditions, end of favoritism, computers and other equipment for offices...) However, the strikers give 72 hours to the Ministry to implement this agreement, otherwise they threaten to resume their blocking movement.

UN sets stage for end of peacekeeping in Haiti. A worried Dominican Republic objects

(Article Attached)

The United Nations Security Council on Friday renewed its justice-support peacekeeping mission in Haiti for a final six months, after which it will maintain only a special political mission in the crisis-ridden nation after Oct. 15. Council members voted 13-0 in favor of the final six-month renewal, with the Russian Federation and Dominican Republic both abstaining. The Dominican Republic, which shares the island of Hispaniola with Haiti, called the withdrawal of peacekeepers in six months — as Haiti continues to face an ongoing political and economic crisis, deteriorating humanitarian conditions and State Department travel warning — premature. “For the Dominican Republic [the peacekeeping mission] will come to an end at the same time we are expecting to see elections held in Haiti, a moment that can always fall into instability,” Ambassador José Singer Weisinger said. “We believe that we should weigh the moment and the conditions for this ... The work of this Security Council is to ensure that there is... international peace.”

32. Dispatches from Haiti: Cite Soleil—April 8, 2019

I went into Cite Soleil today for the first time in a while. Soleil has been “closed for business” the last couple of weeks. Two gangs have been shooting it out and innocent people have been caught in the middle. Why gangs in two parts of the slum have been unhappy with each other is not for me to say. I have heard different reasons but have no first-hand knowledge. I do know the gangs get their guns and ammo from somewhere. I will let others speculate why fighting happens between neighbors.

33. Haiti stands ‘at the crossroads’ between peacekeeping, development – Bachelet urges strengthened ‘human rights protection’

UN-Haiti partnership ‘must evolve’ says Peacekeeping chief As the second leg of the March-April “joint presidencies” of France and Germany continues, Security Council President and Germany’s Ambassador Christoph Heusgen, invited the UN peacekeeping chief to take the floor. Jean Pierre Lacroix, pointed out that no violent demonstrations have occurred since “the ten days of unrest” from 7 to 15 February, when 41 people were killed, another 100 injured, and human rights largely abused.

Loune Viaud, Executive Director of NGO Zanmi Lasante, Partners in Health's sister organization in Haiti and a recipient of a "Women of the Year" award from Ms. Magazine, also briefed the Council. She spoke of gender-based violence and the lack of access to women's health care as "one of the country's greatest challenges to development", encouraging the Council to view it as part of "reinforcing the relationship between sustainable development and peace and security". Moreover, Ms. Viaud urged the Council during the UN's Mission reconfiguration, to support "the urgent humanitarian needs of women and girls"; and call for Haiti to create "greater legal protection" for them, including "a comprehensive law on gender-based violence".

36. U.N. is set to end peacekeeping in Haiti. Can the country's police force do the job?

By all accounts, Haiti's fledgling national police force is considered to be the United Nations' one success story in the country following 15 years of peacekeeping. Barely 2,500 officers when the U.N. returned in 2004 after an armed revolt led to the president's ouster, the force today is 15,051 officers working out of 376 police stations, with a presence in every major municipality. But as the U.N. Security Council prepares to be briefed Wednesday on the situation in Haiti, ahead of its decision to finally end the country's peacekeeping mission, one question remains: Can a volatile Haiti, which has seen over 200 demonstrations since December — including 10 days of violence in February — finally take responsibility for its own security?
